- Partnership Provides A Pathway Towards Graduate Degrees for Texas College Students and Employees -

CLAREMONT, Calif., May 31, 2019 -- Claremont Lincoln University, an online by design graduate school focusing on providing a socially conscious education, announced its new partnership with Texas College, located in Tyler, TX. The two institutions share close mission alignment in providing individuals with a balance of “intellectual, psychological, social and spiritual development”.

With this agreement, Claremont Lincoln University will offer a scholarship toward tuition to Texas College students at the Baccalaureate level and employees within the Texas College network. This scholarship can be applied towards all CLU master’s degree programs in addition to workshops, both online and on-site. CLU currently provides master’s degrees in Social Impact, Peace and Social Justice, and in Organizational Leadership with concentrations in 7 disciplines: Civic Engagement, Ethics, Healthcare, Higher Education, Human Resources, Professional Studies, and Tech Management.

“We are thrilled to be able to provide our educational programs to Texas College,” said Joseph Sallustio, CLU COO. “We recognize the significance of this partnership—in the same way these programs will make a positive impact on individual students’ personal and career development, they will also directly influence and benefit their communities throughout the Texas region.”

“Many of the students are looking for non-traditional start periods and online classes. We also have a number of employees that have been looking for the ‘right’ school,” said Dr. Stephen Jones, Texas College Vice President of Academic Affairs. “We believe that we have found that with Claremont Lincoln University.”
